

Our courseware is based on 4 interactive frames

The screenshot displays the Cognistar Online Continuing Legal Ed interface, which is organized into four main interactive frames:

- Watch: Features a video player with a man in a suit speaking. Navigation arrows are visible on the left and right sides of the video frame.
- Transcript: Contains a text area with the following text:

Before we get into term sheets and the nitty gritty of the details of term sheets, I thought I would start by setting the context. Any time you enter into a negotiation for a term sheet or any other legal document for that matter, it's important to take a step back and determine where you are. What's going on in the world around you? What's the greater context of the transaction that you have at hand?

So the first question out of the gate is, "Who are you representing?" In a venture capital financing term sheet, there are really four groups of entities that you may be
- Exhibits: Titled "Who Are You Representing?", it features a diagram with a central question mark icon and four arrows pointing to different entities:
 - Issuer (represented by a bank icon)
 - Investor (represented by a dollar sign icon)
 - Founder/Entrepreneurs (represented by a lightbulb icon)
 - Prior investors (represented by a line graph icon)
- Outline: A sidebar menu showing the course structure. The current section is "Negotiating Term Sheets", which is expanded to show "A. Break the Query". Other sections include "Complete Course Textbook", "1. Negotiating Synthesis", "2. Valuation", and "A. Define Terms".

At the bottom of the interface, there is a "viewed" bar with a progress indicator and a copyright notice: "Copyright 1999 - 2003 Cognistar Corporation".