The image is a screenshot of a web-based course interface. On the left, a 'Media Panel' is shown with three tabs: 'Watch', 'Listen', and 'Read'. The 'Watch' tab is active, displaying a video of a man in a suit talking on a phone. Above the video are three small circular icons corresponding to the tabs. Below the video are three small circular icons for navigation. To the right of the video are two large arrows pointing left and right. A text box points to the top of the media panel, stating: 'With one mouse click, learners can opt to watch the video, listen to audio only, or simply read the text.' Another text box points to the large arrows, stating: 'The large arrows take the user to the next or previous course segment.' A third text box points to the small navigation icons, stating: 'The small controls allow rapid navigation within the segment.' Below the media panel is a list of course segments: 'I. A. Know the Client', 'II. A. Capital Financing', 'III. A. Apply Market Knowledge', and 'Alliance'. On the right, an 'Exhibits' panel is shown with the title 'Who Are You Representing?'. It features a central graphic of a person with a question mark above them. Below this are four icons with arrows pointing to them: a building icon labeled 'Issuer', a dollar sign icon labeled 'Investor', a lightbulb icon labeled 'Founder/Entrepreneurs', and a line graph icon labeled 'Prior Investors'. Below the exhibit panel, a text box contains the text: 'representing.¹ In a venture capital financing term sheet, there are really four groups of entities that you may be'. At the bottom right, a copyright notice reads: 'Copyright 1999 - 2003 Cognistar Corporation'.
